

On THIS Day

Back to Main

- News Summaries
- Daily News Quiz
- Word of the Day
- Test Prep Question of the Day
- Science Q & A
- Letters to the Editor
- Ask a Reporter
- Web Navigator

- Daily Lesson Plan
- Lesson Plan Archive
- News Snapshot
- Issues in Depth
- On This Day in History
- Crossword Puzzle
- Campus Weblines
- Education News
- Newspaper in Education (NIE)
- Teacher Resources
- Classroom Subscriptions

- Conversation Starters
- Vacation Donation Plan
- Discussion Topics

- Site Guide
- Feedback
- Job Opportunities

Read the full text of The Times article or other headlines from the day.

▶ BUY A REPRODUCTION OF THIS OR ANY FRONT PAGE SINCE 1851

ULBRICHT RESIGNS AS PARTY LEADER IN EAST GERMANY

Ends 25 Years in Post, Citing Age and Ill Health—Honecker, Successor, Also Hard-Liner

By DAVID BRUCE
BERLIN, March 5—Ulrich Haack, 70, resigned as the chairman of the Politburo of the German Democratic Party, a position he held since 1982, on Monday. He had held the post since 1982, when he replaced Erich Honecker, the last leader of the German Democratic Republic, as chairman of the Politburo. Mr. Haack, who is 70, said he was resigning because of his age and ill health. He had held the post since 1982, when he replaced Erich Honecker, the last leader of the German Democratic Republic, as chairman of the Politburo. Mr. Haack, who is 70, said he was resigning because of his age and ill health.

SUPREME COURT, 6-3, RULES JURIES CAN BE EMPOWERED TO IMPOSE DEATH PENALTY

States Expected to Delay Any Action on Executions

3 ISSUES SETTLED

Plea for a Separate Post-Mortem Ruling on Guilt Denied

By KENNETH CROWLEY
WASHINGTON, March 5—The Supreme Court ruled Monday that States may be empowered to allow juries to impose the death penalty on a defendant who has been found guilty of a capital offense. The court's decision, which was 6-3, was a landmark ruling in the history of the death penalty. The court's decision, which was 6-3, was a landmark ruling in the history of the death penalty.

Gasoline Runs Short In Strike's Third Day

By GREGORY PALMER
CHICAGO, March 5—A strike by the city and county employees in Chicago has led to a shortage of gasoline in the city. The strike, which is in its third day, has led to a shortage of gasoline in the city. The strike, which is in its third day, has led to a shortage of gasoline in the city.

7,000 Arrested in Capital War Protest; 150 Are Hurt as Clashes Disrupt Traffic

By RICHARD BULLOCK
WASHINGTON, March 5—A massive demonstration against the war in Iraq broke out in Washington on Monday, with thousands of protesters clashing with police and disrupting traffic. The demonstration, which was the largest in the city since the Vietnam War, resulted in 7,000 arrests and 150 injuries. The protesters, who included members of various groups, were seen clashing with police officers who were trying to clear the area. The demonstration, which was the largest in the city since the Vietnam War, resulted in 7,000 arrests and 150 injuries.

Latin Lanes Turning to Europe for Arms

By GREGORY PALMER
WASHINGTON, March 5—Latin American countries are turning to Europe for arms, according to a report from the Arms Control Association. The report, which was based on information from several sources, said that several Latin American countries, including Colombia and Peru, had purchased arms from European manufacturers. The report, which was based on information from several sources, said that several Latin American countries, including Colombia and Peru, had purchased arms from European manufacturers.

2d Off Broadway Play Wins Pulitzer

By PETER ERB
NEW YORK, March 5—The play "The History of the Jewish People" by Peter Erbe has won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama. The play, which is the second off-Broadway production to win the award, is a historical drama that tells the story of the Jewish people. The play, which is the second off-Broadway production to win the award, is a historical drama that tells the story of the Jewish people.

Job Opportunities

GO TO
The New York Times
ON THE WEB

Are Hurt as Clashes Disrupt Traffic

By Richard Halloran

Washington, Tuesday, May 4 -- About 7,000 antiwar protesters were arrested yesterday morning after fighting running skirmishes with metropolitan police and Federal troops throughout large areas of the nation's capital.

About 150 were also injured in the six hours of disturbances as the protesters, demanding an immediate halt to the war in Vietnam, were thwarted in their plan to stop Government operations.

Shortly before 11 P.M., more than 12 hours after most of the arrests were made, Will Wilson, the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, set up procedures for them to be released.

They were permitted to forfeit a $10 collateral and obtain their freedom. This is the equivalent of a plea of guilty and is a procedure often used for traffic offenders and other persons charged with minor offenses.

Mr. Wilson said almost half of the 7,000 persons arrested were being detained early this morning were facing charges more serious than disorderly conduct and were being held at the Washington Coliseum, an indoor facility.

Until transfers and releases were arranged late last night, virtually all of those arrested had spent 12 hours in temporary outdoor detention facilities near Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium.

Commenting on those released, a Justice Department official said:

"We couldn't just keep those people indefinitely. We had to do something with them."

The protesters, who called themselves the Mayday Tribe, did succeed in disrupting the city's normal functioning by impeding traffic and

OTHER HEADLINES

Supreme Court, 6-3, Rules Juries Can Be Empowered to Impose Death Penalty: 2 Issues Settled: Plea for a Separate Post-Verdict Ruling on Guilt Denied

Ulbright Resigns as Party Leader in East Germany: Ends 25 Years in Post, Citing Age and Ill Health -- Honecker, Successor, Also Hard-Liner

Harness Tracks Ask Right to Book Offtrack Wagers

U.S. Panel Issues Oil-Price Study: Does Not Propose a Rollback on Last Fall's Increase

Gasoline Runs Short in Strike's Third Day

Latin Lands Turning to Europe for Arms

2d Off Broadway Play Wins Pulitzer

harassing Government employees on their way to work, using as weapons trash, tree limbs, stones, bottles, bricks, lumber, nails, tires, rubbish bins and parked cars.

The police fought these tactics with tear gas and nightsticks. Chief Jerry V. Wilson said the demonstrators numbered 12,000 to 15,000. The 7,000 arrests were a record for a single day in the capital.

At the height of the disturbances, tear gas fumes filled the air over some of the city's most famous monuments, streets and grassy flowered parks. Garbage cans, trash, abandoned automobiles and other obstacles littered some chief arteries.

Those arrested included Renine Davis, a leader of the protesters.

Many of those arrested were herded into buses and taken to the fenced practice field of the Washington Redskins football team, near Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium on the eastern edge of the city, or to the District of Columbia Jail, where they were placed in an outdoor courtyard.

A check with three major downtown hospitals showed that 150 of the demonstrators had been injured, most of them slightly, and that five policemen had been hurt. One suffered a broken leg in a motor scooter accident. Scores of others who were scratched, bumped or shaken up were treated by Mayday Tribe medical units.

5,100 Police on Duty

The entire force of 5,100 metropolitan police, acting under Administration instructions to be "firm," was on duty yesterday. They were backed up by 1,500 National Guardsmen and 500 park police. In addition, 10,000 Federal troops were in reserve or deployed to support the police.

Many Government employees avoided the disruptions by going to work early. The Pentagon parking lots were about half full by 5 A.M., and other agencies similarly asked their staffs to report early.

Those coming in later were delayed from one to three hours in some instances but the Civil Service Commission reported that attendance was about normal.

A spokesman for the Mayday Tribe conceded that "we didn't stop the Government this morning, but we've never done this before." For future protests of this order, he said, "we'll be more together."

Leaflets being distributed by the Mayday Tribe stated that the organization had selected four targets for demonstrations early today. The leaflets said the targets were Dupont, Thomas and Scott Circles and Mount Vernon Square, all downtown areas.

After being released, some of those arrested went to students' residences at American University and some to churches that had been kept open for their benefit.

A significant number - but an unknown percentage- of those arrested also decided to leave Washington after their release. Some said they were going home.

This marked the beginning of the third week of protests in the capital over the war.

The first week was entirely peaceful, beginning with a group of perhaps 1,000 young veterans camped on the Mall, a block from the Capitol, who spent the week lobbying in Congress, and continuing through a massive march and rally April 24.

Last week the theme was civil disobedience as small groups blocked the doors of Government buildings and allowed themselves to be arrested. This was the first time that the police had to use riot control tactics to break up the demonstrations.

The scene for yesterday's conflict was set Sunday at 6 A.M., when Chief Wilson unexpectedly announced that the tribe's permit to camp along the banks of the Potomac River had been revoked.

Throughout the morning, some 30,000 youths streamed out of the littered campsite, some heading for home, others seeking refuge in universities, churches, and private homes. Sunday night, they regrouped to plan their assaults.

Before dawn yesterday, they drifted silently in groups of five or 10 toward their designated targets. Regional units had been assigned to the four bridges leading into Washington from Virginia and to major intersections on roads from Maryland. One group assembled at the Washington Monument to march on the Pentagon.

Pentagon Group Dispersed

Police "flying squads" moved to scenes of trouble on motorcycles, motor scooters and aboard buses.

The police did not wait for the protesters to seize a target. Instead, they dispersed the demonstrators with nightsticks and tear gas.

The police tactics broke the protesters into small bands -- some as small as 10 to 20, the largest numbering 50 or 100 -- that roved the streets trying to stop traffic and to plead with motorists to join the demonstration.

The group that headed for the Pentagon was dispersed before reaching the 14th Street Bridge across the Potomac. It split into bands that sat down on Maine Avenue underneath the bridge. These protesters were tear gassed and fled.

Another group tried to stop cars by holding hands and spreading across a southbound lane.

Much of the tear gas thrown along the approaches to the bridge floated into cars and buses bringing Government workers into the city. Dozens of employers were seen hurrying to their offices with tears streaming down their faces.

Only a handful of protesters reached the Pentagon. About 20 Vietnam veterans crossed a railroad bridge and flung paper bags of chicken excrement on the steps of the mall entrance, shouting that it was "for the chicken colonels."

Some protesters driving their own cars, stalled traffic on the Memorial Bridge by driving two or three abreast at five miles an hour. But police helicopters hovering overhead warned the police on the ground.

Another area of conflict was Georgetown, west of the State Department and near the university, where many of the demonstrators spent the night. As they were driven back from the Francis Scott Key Bridge, they cluttered the intersection of M Street and Wisconsin Avenue with cars, wooden railings and garbage cans. Police men cleared the obstacles away in about 15 minutes.

At Dupont Circle, where Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire Avenues intersect, small groups dashed into the circle and out again to draw off the police, while others abandoned trash on a side street to jam up traffic.

Along 21st Street, just west of the circle, traffic was blocked for more than an hour by youths who found a supply of cinderblocks and lumber and placed them in the street along with two automobiles.

Rennie Davis, a leader of the Mayday Tribe, who is a militant activist and was one of the Chicago Seven convicted under the Federal anti-riot law, was taken into custody by the Federal Bureau of Investigation about 4 P.M. as he emerged from a news conference in midtown Washington.

He was held on $25,000 bond on a charge of conspiring to violate citizens' rights to travel in interstate commerce and to work for agencies of the United States Government.

A warrant was issued for the arrest of John Froines, another member of the Chicago Seven, on the same charge. Mr. Froines was acquitted by the Chicago jury.

Mr. Davis, 30 years old, has made numerous speeches about the planned demonstration in the last few months. The position in the Mayday organization of Mr. Froines, 30, was not clear.

Back to the top of this page.

Back to today's page.
Go to another day.

Front Page Image Provided by UMI

Copyright 2008 The New York Times Company

Children's Privacy Notice